in my office i am encased in bookshelves which hold an accumulation of literature on ecology that represents the papers and books over the last 50 years my students enjoy rummaging through this collection because it contains a record of the history of ecology and is full of surprises some of the most recent material pertains to landscape ecology a subject that literally emerged fully active at the veldhoven international congress organized by the landscape ecologists of the nether lands in 1981 the subject has developed quickly it has one or more journals which publish short works it has a series of text books and it has just begun a series on monographs one of the textbooks in landscape ecology is titled principles and methods in landscape ecology and was written by the italian ecologist almo farina in 1998 my students like this text especially well because it is direct to the point and comprehensive farina is on loan much of the time in the present volume almo farina again addresses the subject of landscape ecology but from a different perspective than he took in his textbook landscape in action focuses on the application of the principles and concepts to

problem solving the two books make a pair with the first technical and conceptual and the second applied to problems of land and water at large scale this book is located within the contemporary discourse of human geography ecology and the cultural landscape these essays amend earlier anthropocentric perspectives on the conquest of nature by placing people in symbiosis with their environment and in doing so they seek to ensure a secure common future for both from generation to generation people experience their landscapes differently humans depend on their natural environment it shapes their behavior while it is often felt that deities responsible for both natural benefits and natural calamities such as droughts famines floods and landslides need to be appeased we presume that in many societies lakes rivers rocks mountains caves and groves were considered sacred individual sites and entire landscapes are often associated with divine actions mythical heroes and etiological myths throughout human history people have also felt the need to monumentalize their sacred landscape but this is where the similarities end as different societies had very different understandings believes and practices the aim of this new thematic appraisal is to scrutinize carefully our evidence and rethink our methodologies in a multi disciplinary approach more than 30 papers investigate diverse sacred landscapes from the iberian peninsula and britain in the west to china in the east they discuss how to interpret the intricate web of ciphers and symbols in the landscape and how people might have experienced it we see the role of performance ritual orality textuality and memory in people s sacred landscapes a diachronic view allows us to study how landscapes were rewritten adapted and redefined in the course of time to suit new cultural political and religious understandings not to mention the impact of urbanism on people s understandings a key question is how was the landscape manipulated transformed and monumentalized especially the colossal investments in monumental architecture we see in certain socio historic contexts or the creation of an alternative humanmade seemingly non natural landscape with perfectly astronomically aligned buildings that define a cosmological order sacred landscapes therefore aims to analyze the complex links between landscape religiosity and society developing a dialectic framework that explores sacred landscapes across the ancient world in a dynamic holistic contextual and historical perspective allows for a rethinking of the evolving cultural landscape s positioning with valuable heritages in the context of a post industrial society the book is written towards reinterpreting the cultural landscape by conceptualizing the human landscape for scholars practitioners and students interested in rural cultural conservation and revitalization heritage management traditional architecture and landscape planning and urban rural development how do people perceive the land around them and how is that perception changed by history this book explores this question from an anthropological angle assessing the connections between place space identity nationalism history and memory in a variety of different settings around the world taking historical change and memory as key themes it is a broad study that will appeal to a readership across the social sciences contributors from north america australia new zealand taiwan and europe explore a wide variety of case studies that includes seascapes in jamaica the solomon islands the forests of madagascar aboriginal and european notions of landscape in australia place and identity in 19th century maps and the bogs of ireland contemporary concerns over changing landscapes in papua new guinea and representations of landscape and history in the poetry of the scottish borders european rural landscapes as we experience them today are the result of ongoing processes and interactions between nature and society these are changing fast the future landscapes will be different from those we know currently written for academics policy makers and practitioners this book is the first to explore the complex histories of rural landscapes in europe as a basis for their sound governance in future tensions between the needs of agricultural spaces driven by economic incentives and a variety of non agricultural functions are explored to demonstrate current challenges and the shortfalls in the policies that address them using inspiring case studies that highlight the roles of regional agents and communities the authors go further than the usual analyses to illustrate the importance of local context written by experts currently working to revitalise the rural landscapes of europe the text concludes with suggestions for improving landscape policy and planning practice our health is sustained in part by the built landscapes in which we live our lives these landscapes from bus stops to national park systems influence human health by enabling some activities and discouraging others by inviting some users while excluding others and by supporting or antagonizing our physiological and mental processes by designing constructing and managing built landscapes with the consideration that they are health assets we can better enlist their full potential in our efforts to combat health crises and promote well being the sustainable sites initiative sites north america s only widely available sustainability rating system for built landscapes is uniquely positioned to promote such an elevated awareness of the health value of built landscapes this thesis examines the sites initiative and reconsiders its approach to promoting human health through built landscapes offering several recommendations for improvement although sites incorporates many important health factors into its rating system as it is currently structured it is possible for a landscape to achieve sites highest level of certification without earning any of its health focused credits the recommendations in this thesis aim to increase the significance and visibility of health factors in sites assessment one key recommendation is that sites incorporate the concepts of affordances and enabling landscapes so as to encompass a more holistic and empowering approach to health first published in 1986 landscape meanings and values presents a major contribution to the debate concerning the relationship between theory and practice in landscape analysis and planning it brings together a number of the most eminent researchers commentators and practitioners from both the united states of america and britain to pursue the fundamental meanings and values in landscape the insights into the theory behind landscape management will force a fundamental rethink of the role of landscape architect and land management academic researchers will find the feedback from eminent practitioners a stimulation for more practical research the collection of ideas in the last chapter provides a unique synthesis of the need for an expansion of study into the fundamental significance of landscape today this book will be of value to students of geography environmental studies landscape architecture and land management
